

UNIVERSITI Sains Islam Malaysia (USIM) provides a unique education centred on the integration of revelation (ilmu Naqli) and rational knowledge (ilmu Aqli).

USIM has eight faculties and offers more than 60 academic programmes in the fields of Islamic studies, science, finance, Islamic banking, medicine, dentistry, food biotechnology, law, Arabic language, counselling and communication. The courses are taught in both English and Arabic.

One of the earliest faculties in USIM is the Faculty of Syariah and Law (FSU) that has more than 1,000 students and 66 academic staff.

The main programmes offered are the Bachelor of Syariah and Law with honours (SMSU) and the Bachelor of Fiqh and Fatwa with honours (SMFF).

FSU also offers the Diploma in Judicial and Legal Syariah Practice (DIJAP) as a postgraduate diploma programme besides Masters in Syariah, Masters in Law and Masters in Comparative Law as well as a PhD programme in Syariah and Judiciary.

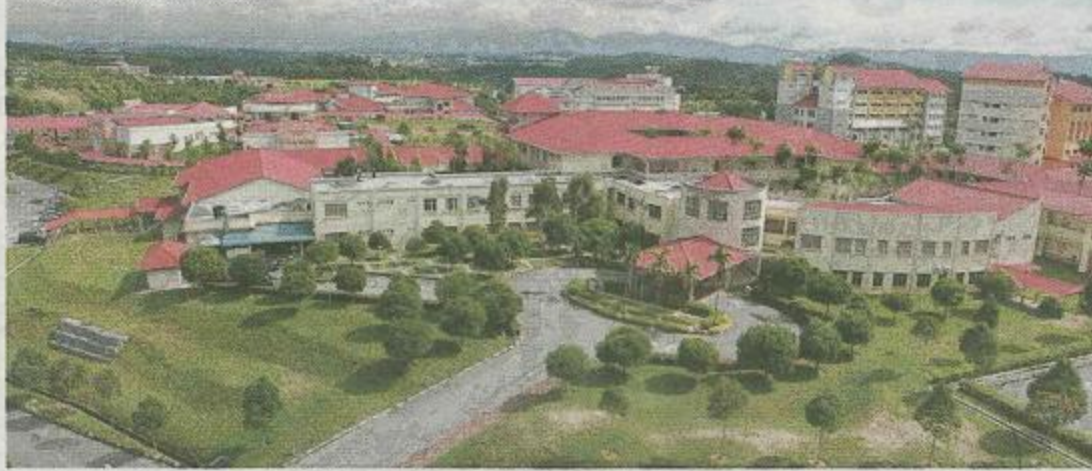

The faculty is in the process of offering more programmes in the fields of Islamic finance and halal industry to meet the needs of the industry.

FSU's mission is to be the reputable hub for syariah and law education that contributes to the sustainability of the global community.

The faculty aims to produce successful graduates and world-class research in the field of syariah and law that is recognised nationally and internationally.

Paving the way forward

USIM's Faculty of Syariah Law's mission is to be a reputable hub for syariah and law education.

FSU practises high-quality teaching and learning activities based on current research, which are driven by moral values and professional ethics. FSU's objectives are:

- To produce graduates who excel in the field of syariah and law
- To produce scholars and experts who are capable of solving community problems related to syariah and law
- To equip graduates with Islamic studies knowledge and to produce noble characters
- To produce professional workforce in the field of syariah and law

● To develop world-class research that can solve national and social problems related to syariah and law

There has also been prominent student achievement such as winning the Chief Justice Debating Cup and the overall Best Memorial in the International Humanitarian Law Mooting Competition.

In addition, the published works of FSU's academics have won the Malaysian Consultative Council of Islamic Organisation's (MAPIM) Best Book award in the social science category, Best Original Work (Book) and Best Original Work (Paper) in the English social science cluster, as well as the National Level Best Editing prize.

The graduates from FSU have a broad choice of career in the market.

"There is no limitation for syariah graduates. They are in-demand not only in Malaysia but worldwide," says Dr Yasmin Hanani Mohd Safian, the dean of FSU.

"Unlike the older days, the careers of syariah graduates are not limited to religious teachers, clerics or religious officers. Syariah graduates can enter the industrial markets as syariah officers in areas such as the corporate sector and banking industry.

This is a challenge and an opportunity that should be taken by the FSU students to improve their credibility, marketability, integrity and accountability," says Dr Yasmin.

FSU students are expected to be concerned and be updated of the current issues in their working environment, which is becoming more global and challenging.

FSU aspires to be involved with established players and practitioners of law and syariah in the industry.

FSU's management is also committed to making the faculty become a renowned school of law and syariah in the future.
